Mission? aries, both Catholic and Protestant, do not interfere more with the Chinese officials more than any other foreigners in China are compelled to interfere. Our presence in a country where we cannot rely upon justice from the authorities, is of necessity an interference. What greater "interference" can there be than the exterritoriality jurisdiction, and yet no one will-maintain-that this is not an absolute necessity. In a country so misgoverned as China, everything interferes with the authorities; or, perhaps, more accurately speaking, the authorities in terfore with everything. If, for example we consider the terrible tortures to which the luckless native Christians were subjected at Tientsin, simply because they were Christians, and the cruelties inflicted not long ago upon the shroffs of a foreign merchant at Chinkiang, who wished to carry goods into the interior in accordance with the privileges agreed to in the Tientsia Treaty, we shall find it rather difficult to conclude that, in the the Consular agents in China with respect other case, foreign trade, was interfering with the native authorities—the fact being clear

It is to be regretted that this mistaken view has been given forth in a home paper, as it is calculated to injure the reputations of a class of men whose should command the respect even of those who may differ with them on points of dogma. The reason why the Chinese masses were ready to believe the calumnies put about by the Mandarins, is to be found in a totally different direction to any conduct of

Consequence of Abandanias One Colonias. Let us ontegorially and concisely act forth the probable consequences of the abandonment by Great Britain of her colonics. They may be stated thus :- Curtaltment of trade, an subsequent loss of employment for the torlers of the nation. Diminution of supplies of raw stoples for manufacture, Shutting up of sufe securities for the profitable investment of superflinus wealth and redundant capital. Loss of suitable fields for on going enterprise and languishing industry. Diminution of the population of the empire, seeing that in ever outgoing emigrant a subject of the Crown and a cirizen of the State would bollost. Deprive tion of ports of refuge in once of war. Now, all the world may be said to be open to British orgisers. Without her colonies England might find her ships shelterless on the high sens. Loss of putional prestige. England is now respected by other nutions because her ships aweep every ara; because her flag floats over free communities in every zone; because underberllag men of all nationalities and colours enjoy equal rights and than a common citizonship; cause her race and language, more than any other pervade the world. Loss of nationality by all outgried English people Men com pelled to enigrate by the presence of circumstances, the want of employment or the lack of opportunity in this overcrowded island, if they wish to exercise any right of citizenship, must become aliens and foreigners. Loss of terris sure remedy, as they never fail in carrying off, tories where the army can, by frequent change the deprayed billions secretions that float in the and constant exercise, by kept well fitted for stomich and destroy the bedthy natural oranotive service, and inned to the hardships and | ving for foods Sour Stomach, Heartburn Flatuvici situdes of a tuil wirlars. In the words of lency, and all Derangements of the Divestive a most competent authority, Sir George Grey: and Excretory. Organa, are promptly relieved. "That man would be a bold one who would and cured by them. The public should always. say that it was not this training which bear in mind that Bristol's are the only Pills suabled them (i.e. British troops) to discharge made of made of their duties in a manner which they could not have done if they had been simply trained in garrison towns at home. "It is necessary; "unemployed" have styled the "national however, that the sick should always remember inheritance," by the help of which they and that in all diseases that have their origin in the others like them may help to better their blood, condition. Transference of what now consti tutes the strength and the glory of this country to independent or rival powers. Should America, Prussia, or any other rising Power take a helpless but abandoned colony under its protection expressly to act in harmony, together. When England's loss will be the other nation's gain, this is done faithfully, we have no hesitation in The narrowing and debasement of national saying that great relief, and, in most cases, as The narrowing and debasement of national appirations: the recognition of a low standard of patriotism; the measuring of State duties by a money-test; the encrifice of national honour and good faith to a false and fatal economy. And, finally, as regards the colonies themselves, the imposition on them of distasteful and burdensome responsibilities; the infliction on them of confused and anarchic con litions; the with drawnl of that supreme controlling power by which their political destinies are shaped and influenced; the exposure of some of them to bloody outbreaks and servile disturbances; and the implanting amon at them of subittered and hoscile feelings towards the land of their fathers. Surely this is an array of evils dire enough to deter any reasonable Government from a policy which might entail such a heritage of disaster. Nor do we think that when once the statesmen and people of this country come fairly to look upon the question in all its aspects, and to comprehend more clearly
